

HORSES TRAMPLE A FALLEN JOCKEY

McCafferty, Thrown Directly in Path of Races, Fatally Injured in New Orleans.

ENTIRE FIELD IN MIX-UP

Swedish Lad Gets Broken Leg and Has to be Killed—The Races at Benning.

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, March 24.—One of the worst accidents that ever marked the history of racing in New Orleans occurred to-day in the second race at the Fair Grounds. The field of eleven was about to swing into the stretch when Swedish Lad, running sixth, was jumped on by one of the horses behind him and his rear leg broken. Courtier, following, fell over Swedish Lad. Jockey McCafferty, who rode Courtier, was thrown directly in the path of the oncoming horses. McCafferty, the only one of the jockeys hurt, was carried to a stable and thence sent to a hospital. It was found that his skull was crushed in both front and back; that both his arms were broken, and that he had other injuries. He died shortly before midnight. Swedish Lad was killed. Summary:

First race—Seven furlongs—Nelle Russell (7 to 1) first, Opinion (3 to 5) second, Jucora (8 to 5) third. Time, 1:28 4-5.

PASTOR WAGNER TO HIS AMERICAN FRIENDS.

The Times-Dispatch begs to announce an arrangement with Charles Wagner, author of "The Simple Life," etc., for the publication in its Sunday edition of a series of sermons, talks and special articles. These interesting and helpful articles will only appear in a few of the leading American papers, including the New York Herald, the Philadelphia North American and The Times-Dispatch. Pastor Wagner sends this greeting to his American friends:

You all who have a home and love it may understand the happiness of a father coming from abroad and kissing his beloved ones. God gave me this joy about thirty years ago. And now I talk and tell about America to the small and the tall, describing the harbor of New York in the night, the Hudson in daylight and sunset, telling of the songs in the churches and the playing of boys and girls over the green turf. But I, more and more, discover that I forgot something in America—I left a part of my heart. I cannot help it. I even talk in spirit with some American friends. I find myself again in great meetings speaking to the American people. Often I dream of missing a train which was to have been taken in order to deliver a lecture in Boston, Philadelphia or Chicago.

Now, American friends, I want to speak to you from afar and to publish some of my Sunday talks in the American papers. I have several explanations to make to my readers. As I am unable to commit my speeches to memory, I deliver them extemporaneously, after very careful preparation. These addresses, which I send to you are taken down in shorthand, corrected and translated, so that they have in every way the character of the spoken word in its simplicity and often its original form.

Throughout all these speeches the spirit of the Gospel in its practical application prevails. The inspiration comes from the book and from life. My study is the world. What is told me by the stars, what the birds sing, what is written over the fields and the forests, the streets and homes and in the troubled or smiling faces of men, that is what I bring on Sunday to the pulpit in the clear light of the Holy Word.

Of course these addresses are delivered in French, but they may interest everybody. "We are all at the bottom" wrote your great President in one of his letters to me. I am sure what I preach here to the children of France will interest the children of America, because we are all members of the same struggling and wandering human family and we need to look up to the mountains whence cometh our help.

Although I do not condemn any dogma, old or young, as they all have their deep and thoughtful spirit, I like more to preach in plain and popular words about the common things. The highest truth is written in simple signs round about us. If we would open our eyes we would discover the steps of the Lord even in the dust of our daily paths.

May I tell you how great and warm for you is the love of the faraway man whose words shall now come to you across the ocean? Now I know that my speech is enlarged and made into your homes. I will never again preach of the thinking of you, your children, your workmen, your teachers and your government. To all the pastors and churches I wish a full gift of what makes our work helpful, of the living power which comes from the hidden springs. To those who suffer I wish the peace of the great comfort which helps us bear our burdens. For the homes I wish structural love.

For the old, the spirit of youth; for the young, a spirit of respect; for the great, humility; for the small, hopefulness; for the boys, vigor; for the girls, gracefulness; for the business man, the knowledge of the only true treasure.

CHARLES WAGNER.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., March 24.—Crazed by jealousy, J. T. Andrews shot his wife, Lily M. Andrews, at the home of her sister this morning about 9 o'clock, and a few minutes later put the revolver to his own head and probably seriously wounded himself. The woman was not dangerously wounded, but the doctors say that Andrews will probably die.

Andrews went to the house this morning and had an interview with his wife, standing on the front porch, fired five times through a glass panel in the door. One ball struck Mrs. Andrews in the back, but a steel corset rib broke its force, and the wound is only about a quarter of an inch deep.

Seeing his wife fall, Andrews fled up Forty-second street to Washington avenue, which had been attracted to the scene by the shooting. Before long, however, he had returned to his home, and the police officers, however, said there was no trouble over the steamer's papers. Agents of the steamer announced that she would positively sail to-morrow.

PAINTER BECOMES DUKE.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

WATERBURY, CONN., March 24.—Edward Ockles, for years a sign painter and painter of billboards, has been elected by bankers at The Hague that he is heir to the title and estate of the Van Sulwyk family, of Holland, his brother, the Duke of Ockles, having died, leaving no children.

Ockles says his real name is Edward Carlisle, and that his grandparents possessed one of the finest properties in Holland. The Duke is still painting signs, and will continue to do so until he gets his possessions, he says. To-day he finished an artistic creation of "Ales, Wines and Liquors," for a saloon.

ECLIPSE MILLS DRIVEN TO WALL

Failure Attributed to Last-Corner in Cotton, Followed by Advance in Wool Prices.

DEED OF ASSIGNMENT FILED

Plant Is One of Oldest of kind in South—To be Closed Indefinitely.

(By Associated Press.)

LOUISVILLE, March 24.—The civil court was asked to-day by the Louisville Trust Company to appoint appraisers for the Eclipse Woolen Mills, a corporation which recently filed a deed of assignment with the trust company. According to the secretary and treasurer, John P. Chenoweth, of the Eclipse Company, the liabilities are about $200,000. Assets are expected to total $275,000.

The failure is attributed to the last corner in cotton followed by a rapid increase in the prices of wool and woolen stock. Attorneys for the company announced that the mills will probably be closed indefinitely in a week.

The Eclipse Woolen Mills is one of the oldest plants of the kind in the South. The company has been controlled for the last three years by D. A. Chenoweth, president of the Indiana Woolen Manufacturing Company of Indianapolis, Ind., his son, John P. Chenoweth, and O. B. Henderson, who is vice-president of the company.

(By Associated Press.)

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., March 24.—The directors of the Indiana Woolen Manufacturing Company made an assignment to-day of the assets of the company to the Union Trust Company, which was named as assignee. This assignment followed that of the Eclipse Woolen Mills at Louisville, the majority of the stock in both concerns being owned by D. A. Chenoweth, of this city.

The liabilities of the local concern are placed by Mr. Chenoweth at $200,000, with book assets of $400,000.

HARD LUCK FOR CRACK HUNTERS

and although the day was ideal, the pack eager, and the field on edge, nothing but disappointment after disappointment came to dishearten and depress.

The field gradually faded away, until finally but seven of the original fifty followed the hounds. At half-past 2 it was decided to call off the pack, and master and field turned to the Mecklenburg Hotel, beyond and away from the two negro hunters, "Brown" and "Jim," to bring in the pack. As luck would have it, nigger luck, as Jim expressed it, the hounds found and went away almost before the hunting party had time to get ready. The hunt was over in thirty minutes of a royal and heart-breaking run, pulled down a big gray fox. All of the hounds that had previously made such good performance were out to the front, and "Brown" and "Jim," belonging to J. W. Baptist, and R. W. Elam, and "David Crockett," Lizzie, Tanner and notably Teddie and Dinah, owned by Mr. Philip Hunt, of Townsville, Va., and "Polly," a very handsome bitch, belonging to Mr. E. A. Lewis, of the same place.

A Grand Day.

It was a great day for the two colored hunters when they rode proudly into the grounds of the Mecklenburg Hotel, followed by one hundred and thirty-five of the crack hounds of Virginia and the new hunters, and they alone, had killed a fox when their masters had relinquished the chase in despair.

Brown's ancient blue truck coat swelled proudly over his inflated chest, and Jim's coat skin cap positively bristled with feathers.

To-morrow morning a lively red Pennsylvania fox will be turned out, and a rattling run is anticipated. If a kill is recorded within the first two hours a wild fox will be hunted after. The conclusion of the week's sport, than which there has been none more notable, certainly in the last fifty years.

To-night the great tug-bull was held at the Mecklenburg Hotel, in which 100 couples participated and was followed by a splendid supper.

A Splendid Crowd.

The hotel was crowded with distinguished guests who have gathered to honor the occasion, and the event promises to fulfill the anticipation of the most sanguine. Dancing and fox hunting from time immemorial have traveled hand and hand. One old sportsman, who will never be too old to hunt, but whose days of hunting have long since passed, said to-night:

"Although I can't dance, I love to look at it next to seeing hounds work, and I tell you, it's a grand sight."

I tell you if this was fox hunt, I would be a mighty mucky fox hound and in the race.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

THE MECKLENBURG, CHASE CITY, VA., March 24.—Representatives of twelve packs of fox hounds met here to-night and an organization will shortly be effected by which all fox hunting clubs in Virginia and North Carolina will be brought together to improve hounds and to further the sport of fox hunting in general.

Yermon, Hughes and W. H. Elam, Jr., Roberts, Sneed, Jackson and Allen Feltis were appointed a committee to secure a charter and to formulate a scheme of definite organization. Every hunt club owner of fox hounds and fox hunter will be invited to join the proposed organization.

Old Hunter's Dictum.

Mr. Sneed, of Boydton, (than whom no better fox hunter lives today, so Judge Aiken, of Danville, says, gave out the following dictum to a group of disappointed sportsmen this afternoon:

"It isn't good to kill a fox every time you go out. That kind of thing would make fox hunting cheap. If we would get everything else, we want all the time we couldn't ever get anything that is worth wanting."

That's just the idea that prevails among these honest old fashion sportsmen who keep their own packs and hunt the fox in the same good old fashion manner that obtained in the days of their grandfathers and their grandfathers before him.

It is the real fox hunting without show, sham or pretense—a desire for sport without the murderous desire for killing. It is an old saying that an Englishman when seeking pleasure went
